

Testimonial for Breffni May, May Financial Planning

10th May, 2010

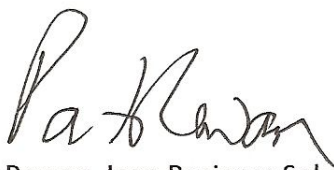

Although the market is changing, financial advisors are still primarily product based and commission focussed. In looking for a financial advisor, I wanted someone who could offer me truly independent advice, would take a holistic long term view of my finances, and would provide a fee-based, rather than commission-based service.

I started dealing with Breffni in November last year and have been very happy with his service. He has taken a very structured approach to reviewing our financial needs, has asked us questions we have not considered before, and challenged our thinking in a number of areas. A 'whole life' financial projection clearly showed the benefit of small changes to significantly improve our overall financial position. We now have a much better picture of our finances, and with Breffni's help, are more confident of achieving our goals for the future.

I would highly recommend May Financial Planning services to anyone who wants to fully understand their current financial position and what they need to do to protect the future for themselves and their family.

Breffni is a true professional and is committed to making life better for his clients. His independence from any financial institution and fee-based service ensure a client-focussed service and his 'whole life' financial planning model ensures that decisions are made with the future in mind.

Lastly, in many cases, his fees will be more than covered by commission savings which is an added bonus !
